The Minister for Infrastructure, Planning and Employment, Jonathan Attard, addressed the launch of the consultation process for Jobsplus' new strategy for the 2027–2032 period, during a stakeholder dialogue meeting.

The strategy will establish the organisation's priorities and strategic direction for the next six years, with a focus on key areas including the digitalisation of its processes and services, the recruitment and integration of foreign workers, the importance of training and skills development, as well as strengthening collaboration with employers.

Minister Jonathan Attard stated that "Jobsplus has the potential to further strengthen its strategic role within the Maltese labour market. We want an Agency that not only responds to today's needs but is also capable of anticipating tomorrow's challenges, with a strong focus on skills development, labour market participation and matching workers with employers' needs."

Minister Attard also stressed that the future of the labour market cannot be shaped by a single institution alone. It requires a shared vision, collaboration and the continuous commitment of all those involved.

The Minister emphasised that stakeholders in Malta have a particularly important role to play in shaping Jobsplus' strategy for the coming years. Over the years, Jobsplus has assumed a highly important role in the employment sector, while also serving a crucial economic and social function for the country.

"We look forward to further strengthening the role of Jobsplus in the years ahead, as well as reinforcing its position as the national employment agency. We must ensure that we have a dynamic, inclusive and resilient labour market that creates opportunities for workers while responding to the needs of businesses and our economy," Minister Attard stated.

Jobsplus Chief Executive Officer, Celia Falzon, highlighted the importance of this consultation process in shaping the organisation's strategic priorities for the coming years. She stated that "it is important that the development of Jobsplus' new strategy takes into account both social objectives and labour market needs, while considering the interests and requirements of all stakeholders."

Falzon also outlined the main themes that will be addressed in the strategy, including the role of training and skills development in strengthening the labour market, as well as promoting the participation and integration of persons with disabilities and older persons.

She emphasised the need for a clear, forward-looking plan that responds to the current and future needs of the labour market, while also taking into consideration the aspirations and requirements of both jobseekers and employers.

The event also featured discussions with representatives from various sectors, during which stakeholders shared their perspectives and proposals, contributing to the development of Jobsplus' new strategy.

Also present was the Permanent Secretary within the Ministry for Infrastructure, Planning and Employment, Ronald Mizzi.
